Rules for Member Products / Services Listings on the Georgia Beekeepers Association's Website

The GBA web site is used to promote the GBA, and to assist the corporation in completing its mission and goals. The site is maintained by the GBA Webmaster. Any questions or conflicts may be directed to the webmaster. If a conflict cannot be resolved through the webmaster, a member may appeal to the GBA President and/or the Board of Directors.

1. The webmaster will periodically check the membership status of anyone listed on the Products / Services pages of the website. If at any time the listed person's membership status lapses, the webmaster will remove their listing from the website. If at a later date that person renews their membership, it's their responsibility to resubmit their listing request.
2. Any request submittal that is missing required information will not be listed on the site.
3. A member requesting to be placed on a given product and services page is expected in good faith to provide that given product or service. If they are found not to provide a product or service in which they are listed they will be removed from that page.
4. A member can only be listed once on each product and services page.
5. A link to your company or personal web site that pertains to honey/bees/beekeeping can be included with your contact information.
6. Only members that are a certified Master Beekeepers or higher can have that title listed under their name.
7. Only members who are a certified Honey Judge can be listed on the Honey Judge page.
8. Members who have won "Best of Show" in a honey show may have that listed, but only on the pages that pertain to the award. i.e. If you won Best of Show in a honey class it will only be listed on the Honey page. The year in which the award was won must also be listed.
9. Certified Naturally Grown members can have that title listed with their information on the following pages: Honey, Pollen, Bees, Queens, Wax, and Body/Beauty Products.
10. If the member finds that any information was incorrectly copied onto the website, it is their responsibility to contact the webmaster for correction.

All other questions, discrepancies, or issues will be dealt with at the discretion of the Webmaster on a case by case basis.
